FEATURE ARTICLE: COLOR FORECAST 2010

The Pantone Color Institute has been the world's color authority for 45 years. Their color of the year for 2010 is turquoise, Pantone 15-5519. Pantone says "turquoise transports us to an exciting, tropical paradise while offering a sense of protection and healing in stressful times."

What can turquoise do for your interior design scheme?

With both warm and cool undertones, it adds a punch of excitement to neutrals and browns. Turquoise complements pinks and reds, creates a classic look with deep blues, and livens up all greens.

The experts have set four color palettes for 2010.

The first focuses on tinted neutrals, which include olive gray, silver gray, taupe gray, champagne beige, and angora.

The second group encompasses the idea of escaping to far-off places like Africa, Russia, and Dubai. Lustrous metallics and spicy tones give us a mental and physical break from the uncertainty of our times.

The third palette is all about innovation, passion, creativity, radical rules. These colors are sporty with shimmering metallic undertones, cosmic brights, like cobalt, tangerine, mimosa yellow, and strawberry ice.

The fourth palette embraces nature, an eco-friendly awareness. Vegetable colors, plant colors, and soil colors are full of life and vitality. Colors like tomato puree, paprika, apple green, and peach blossom entice and appeal to both the eyes and taste buds.

You don't want to miss next month's issue, where we'll continue exploring the power of color and how you can use color to transform your home.
